The Colin Powell School announces the Dean's Pro-Seminar on Immigration. This seminar, led by Dean Vincent Boudreau and open to a select group of CCNY alumni and current students, is designed as a semester-long exploration of the role that immigration has played in American life. It is also designed to mobilize the tremendous, intergenerational expertise of our faculty, our students and our alumni around the question of immigration. Each week, an expert from the Colin Powell School faculty will deliver a public lecture, preceded by a more intensive discussion with students and alumni registered for the class. Apart from class discussions and public lectures, class activities will include readings, visits to important sites outside the classroom to deepen our knowledge of the immigrant experience, and an exciting oral history project designed to document and preserve the relationship between immigration, CCNY and the making of America.

The Dean's Pro-Seminar, 'Perspectives in Immigration', is a unique classroom, public event and off-campus learning experience. Each class will be made up of 12 current students and 12 members of our alumni network from all generations of City College graduating classes. The cost for alumni, which includes all off-campus activities, is $500 for the semester. This fee includes course materials and student activity fees.
